

RUMOR OF CHANGE IN
SITE OF POST OFFICE

The regular meeting of the Board of City Councilmen was held last Monday evening, April 22, Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

Rumors have been floating around that the Daly City branch post office is to be moved to a location somewhere in the Excelsior district, San Francisco. The board instructed the city clerk to communicate with Postmaster Todd, and endeavor to obtain some information on the matter, as to what it is all about.

The City Council received a complaint pertaining to children playing on the streets in the vicinity of the park. The writer of the letter stated that there was seemingly no reason why children should insist on playing in the streets when they have a nice park in which to romp around in. Chief of Police Doyle was instructed to look into this matter, and see that the practice of playing in the streets be stopped.

Engineer Klassen reported many contractors are interested in the street work in Jefferson Park and the block below School street. Bids for this work will be opened next Monday, and a number of contractors are expected to submit bids.

The street committee reported plans under way for a proposed opening to the Junipero Serra boulevard. A meeting will be held during the week with the Highway District Board to work out this plan.

A letter was received from Assemblyman Harry L. Parkman, promising support of the city's resolution for passing Senate Bills 651 and 652 for a state appropriation for study of sewage and sewage disposal, and thanking the City Council for the interest taken in the matter.

The uniform traffic ordinance was passed for its first reading.

The regular monthly bills were read and ordered paid.

LOCAL BALL TEAM
LOSES FAST GAME

The Daly City Merchants' baseball team tasted defeat at the hands of the Ferrari Hardwares last Sunday, the final score being 5-1. It was a pitcher's battle for eight innings between Lyons for the visitors and Ford of the home team. Both men pitched great ball. The season's largest crowd witnessed the game.

The Daly City Merchants and the South San Francisco Redmen have arranged to play a series of three games. The first game, although it is not definitely settled as yet, will probably be played at Jefferson Union high school grounds on Sunday, May 5, at 2:30, and all are invited to be present.

K. OF C.'S TO ATTEND
MASS AND BREAKFAST

A large and enthusiastic meeting of Daly City Council No. 2712, Knights of Columbus, was held on Tuesday evening, April 16.

Several members and officers from Mission Council were present, among them Grand Knight Roche, District Grand Knight Zumwalt and Financial Secretary Ashe. Secretary Ashe gave a very interesting talk, which all the members enjoyed.

The members have been invited to the communion mass and breakfast of San Francisco Councils on May 5. High mass will be held at St. Mary's Cathedral and breakfast will follow at the Whitcomb Hotel. Many prominent men of the order will be present and speeches at the breakfast will be broadcast. The whole affair is a tribute to the Reverend Archbishop Edward J. Hanna. In the afternoon the second and third degrees will be exemplified to a large class at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Golden Gate avenue.

In the near future Mission Council will honor Daly City Council in their meeting hall. Grand Knight Roche of Mission Council has promised the local Council that nothing will be spared in the way of showing them one great big evening. W. L. M.

ENTERTAINS AUXILIARY
MEMBERS OF COMPANY 4

Mrs. Mae Doyle, of Brunswick street, entertained the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Fire Company No. 4 at her home on Thursday evening of last week.

After an interesting business meeting, a very pleasant social evening was enjoyed. Mrs. Doyle was presented with pretty hand painted china as a house present from the club for her new home.

Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Annie Fonseca, to the following guests: Mrs. Flora Poppiano, Mrs. Maynard Chesney, Mrs. Margaret Viotti, Mrs. Grace L. Augustien, Mrs. Nan Hilton, Mrs. A. Vireno, Mrs. Lillian Landini, Mrs. Beatrice Cuneo, Mrs. Joe Doyle, Mrs. E. Oliotti, and Mrs. V. Fenstermaker.

YOUTH HAS CLOSE
CALL IN SAND CAVE

William Korvic, who resides with his aunt, Mrs. V. J. Spooner, at the Mission Auto Camp on Mission street, had a narrow escape from death last Friday morning.

William, with two small companions, had been digging a large hole, about six feet deep, four feet long and two feet in width, having been engaged in the task for several days, in a sand lot on Hillside boulevard, in back of the camp grounds. He was resting at the bottom of the excavation in a leaning position, while his friends rested on the ground outside of the excavation, when over two feet of sand caved in on him, pinning him face downward.

The other two boys notified the proprietor of the camp of the plight of their companion, and Chief of Police Doyle was immediately notified. Chief Doyle and several other men hurried to the scene of the accident and soon had the youngster out of his precarious position.

When rescued the boy was gasping for breath, and in a few moments would undoubtedly have been suffocated. He is around again, but little the worse for his experience, but will probably endeavor to find some other form of amusement in the future.

BON VOYAGE PARTY GIVEN IN HONOR OF MISS DETJEN

Miss Lois Detjen, of San Francisco, was guest of honor at a bon voyage party given by her college friends at the home of Miss Grace Hauptli, of San Pedro avenue, last Saturday evening. Miss Detjen will leave on May 7 for a tour of Europe, and will be gone about six months.

A large ship decorated the center of the table and each guest received a tiny ship as a souvenir. The table was prettily decorated in blue, green and white.

Those present were the Misses Lois Detjen, Florence Petersen, Dolly Nocer, Calra Cook, Anna Sambraile, Clara Hoadley, Cecelia Dettmer, Grace Hauptli and Lillian Hauptli.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE ADOPT COMMISSION PLAN

The Young People of Calvary Baptist Mission meet every Sunday evening at 6:45. All young people always welcome. These meetings are planned and put over by the young people, for young people, and are very interesting as well as helpful.

Next Sunday will be Missionary Sunday. This occurs the fourth Sunday in each month. The B. P. Y. U. topic for this week will be along this line of thought. Missionary meetings are always interesting because this is the time that people of other lands and nationalities can be studied.

We have adopted the Great Commission plan, a new and very fine form for Young People's Unions in the church—for the Master.

Last Friday evening the Union enjoyed a wonderful party at the home of our president, in honor of a contest that was just completed.

Young people, welcome to Calvary Mission.

CALVARY MISSION AWARDED
FLAGS FOR ATTENDANCE

Thanks to the splendid co-operation of the people of this community, Calvary Baptist Mission brought home the bacon, in the form of two beautiful silk flags, one the United States flag and the other a Christian flag. These were presented to Calvary Mission for having the largest percentage of their members present at the San Francisco Baptist rally. Two hundred and fifty per cent were present, but as visitors counted, this was in order. The victory, has inspired the Mission to attempt greater things.

The men of the church decided to give the women a vacation, so they are going to give a fellowship supper on Wednesday, May 1. Everyone is invited to attend. If you don't think men can cook, just come and see.

Something happens every meeting at Calvary.

ARTHUR C. MINTZ, Pastor.

Miss May Arrives

CONTRACT AWARDED FOR JEFFERSON SHOP

At a special meeting of the Jefferson Union high school Board of Education held at the high school building at 8 o'clock last Tuesday evening, the contract for the construction of the auto mechanics building was awarded to Sorensen and Haggmark, of San Francisco, for the sum of $23,198.

Chairman Bentley presided. Trustees Brown, Gehringer, Jensen and Twisten and Principal James Ferguson were present. The office of Mr. W. H. Weeks, architect, was represented by Mr. P. L. Dragon. Twenty-five builders and contractors were present when the bids were opened.

Competition was very keen. Ten bids were received from prominent firms representing Alameda, Oakland, San Francisco, San Mateo, Palo Alto, and San Jose. The lowest bid was that of Sorensen and Haggmark, $23,198, and the highest was $26,340. The time permitted by the contract for the construction of the building is seventy days. Sorensen and Haggmark gave the board assurance that the building would be completed in good time for the opening of school next fall. It is expected that work will commence within fifteen days.

RECKLESS DRIVING
ON THE INCREASE

Records of the Division of Motor Vehicles show that reckless driving is on the increase in California and is largely responsible for the huge total of deaths and injuries suffered in traffic accidents.

Justice Ellis C. Johnson, of the local police court, is co-operating with the Safety Conference of the California Development Association in an intensive campaign this month against reckless and careless drivers in an effort to eliminate avoidable accidents.

"Any motorist who drives in such a way as to endanger life, limb or property by violating some road rule as cutting in, driving on the wrong side of the road, or cutting corners, etc., is a reckless driver and should be arrested and charged with this offense," states Judge Johnson. "I shall bring every force to bear in aiding to decrease the great toll of deaths on streets and highways of California."

"The courts should make it expensive for reckless drivers, and where a fine alone will have little effect upon a particular individual, the court should impose a jail sentence. A consistent policy of this kind will soon convince the reckless driver that reckless driving does not pay."

HILLSBOROUGH EXCLUDES
THE TOBIN CLARK ESTATE

Certification of the vote by which Hillsborough approved exclusion of 100 acres of the historic Tobin Clark estate, preparatory to its becoming a part of San Mateo by annexation, was made by the Hillsborough town trustees last Monday night and forwarded to Sacramento. The vote was unanimous in favor of exclusion with a total of 74. Four votes were polled by residents of the excluded area.

Entertains Schoolmates

A party was given last Saturday evening by Miss Evelyn McKee, of Irvington street, to several of her school friends. A delightful evening was spent in dancing and at midnight a tempting luncheon was served by her mother, Mrs. Charles McKee, Sr., to the following guests: Florence Rancatore, Blanche Romiguere, Irene Smith, Florence Kennedy, Martha Johnson, Ruth Moran, Margaret McKee, Evelyn McKee; Hughie Smith, Lawrence Kennedy, James Mullen, Bobby Stone, Bill Ramey, Buddy Hilton, Philip Hass and Charles McKee, Jr.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM
NEAR CHAMPIONSHIP

The right to play San Jose for the championship of the P. A. L. was won by the Jefferson Union high school baseball team last Tuesday when the team defeated Burlingame high by a score of 5 to 3 at Burlingame.

The Bearcats managed to chalk up a 2-0 lead in the first inning on two hits. An overthrow to second base gave them another run in the third inning, by advancing the player to third, from where he got home on Kennedy's failure to catch the ball. The first two innings were hitless for Jefferson.

The Indians came to bat in the third determined to score. Markovich got the first opportunity when he was hit by the ball, and therefore put on first. He was advanced to third on Gibbons' hit. Vireno then got a clean hit over second which brought home Markovich and Gibbons. Andy advanced to third, but was put out when caught between third and home. Nystrom walked and scored on a two-base hit made by Kennedy, who got in when the catcher missed the ball. The third inning ended with the score standing 4-3.

The Indians scored again in the fourth when Conti came in on Vireno's hit. That ended the scoring for the day, although Jefferson came close to another run in the seventh, when Varni was on third with only one out.

Gene Keagle did a good bit of pitching, allowing the Bearcats few hits after the second inning.

S. F. SUPERVISOR WILL ADDRESS MERCHANTS

W. H. Clay, acting secretary of the Daly City Merchants' Association, announces that the next regular meeting of the association will be held at the City Hall on Wednesday evening, May 1, at 8:30 o'clock.

After the business meeting, the merchants will be addressed by Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher, chairman of the streets committee of the San Francisco board of supervisors.

Refreshments will be served after the meeting. All Daly City merchants, business and professional men are requested to be present.

SAN MATEO STUDENTS
TAKE EDITOR FOR RIDE

Seven San Mateo Junior College students who participated in the kidnapping last Tuesday of Ed Bauer, Jr., editor of the "San Mateo," college publication, were suspended on Wednesday by Frank H. Boren, supervising principal of the Junior College district, following an inquiry during which members of the self-styled "Black Gang" appeared before the district head and Dean Robert J. Hopkins. Boren did not publicly announce how long the students would stand suspended.

Ed Bauer, Sr., father of the college editor, had warned school authorities that he would institute police action unless proper punishment was meted out to the gang which threw his son in an automobile and "took him for a ride." Names of the suspended students, two of them said to be football men, were not announced.

DRIVER SUED FOR $60,000

Joe Di Rista, driver of an automobile which ran down and fatally injured Joe Amore, Market Street Railway flagman, at Mission street and Sikes avenue, March 26, was sued in the Superior Court last Wednesday for $60,000 damages. The suit was filed by Amore's widow, Mrs. Josephine Amore, and her two small sons, Antonio and Angelo. The complaint charges Di Rista's negligence caused the tragedy.

TEACHING CHILDREN TO BE TRAFFIC WISE

California school children are training to be a traffic-wise and safety-minded generation of motorists and pedestrians. They are learning in the classroom to beware of the hazards of streets and highways. Instruction in careful conduct in traffic principles of "safety first" being given in the elementary schools in causing boys and girls to practice habits of caution that are saving lives and limbs.

This is evident in the records assembled by the public safety department of the California State Automobile Association which inaugurated the school safety training plan several years ago and has sponsored it since with the approval of educators and public officials.

Since the general adoption of this plan, notable reductions have been attained in the traffic accident fatality rate among children of school age and this improvement has been credited chiefly to the safety educational work in schools. For instance San Francisco's motor vehicle accident toll of 20 lives for the first three months of this year includes not a single child fatality, while the list of 29 for the same period a year ago included four children.

Motorists as well as the general public have watched with interest the progress of the legislation placing the state stamp of authority on this type of classroom work. A bill now before the legislature provides for compulsory instruction in public safety and accident prevention especially on streets and highways in the elementary and secondary schools of the state and in normal schools and teachers' colleges.

Education in the avoidance of accidents on the streets, in schools on the playgrounds, or at home is already well organized in practically all schools of the state through the combined activity of boards of education, parent-teachers' associations and automobile associations.

The instruction in carefulness has been incorporated in many studies and activities of the children in their classrooms. The youngsters build model street intersections, work arithmetic problems using accident statistics, present safety playlets and in many other ways learn how to avoid accidents.

School safety patrols have been organized in 57 cities and in rural schools in every county and have proved to be a major factor in preventing accidents. The patrolmen of these school traffic reserves wear arm badges authorizing them to direct student traffic across streets and to protect other, and especially smaller children, against danger in and around schools and playgrounds.

Safety posters are distributed monthly by the association to 12,500 classrooms. These constitute a big factor in keeping maxims of carefulness constantly before the minds of the children.

SCHOOL WEEK OBSERVED
BY THE CROCKER P. T. A.

The Crocker Parent-Teachers' Association held an exceptionally interesting meeting at the Crocker school last Wednesday afternoon. Seven new members were added to the rapidly growing list. Prof. W. J. Savage, one of Wednesday's new members, holds the honor of being the first gentleman member entered on the list.

The president, Mrs. Ivy Alexander, requested the secretary to send a communication to the Fire Commissioners, asking permission to meet in Company No. 5 fire house, as there is not enough room in the Crocker school to accommodate the splendid attendance at these meetings.

Committee reports were given by Mrs. Standish, Mrs. McDermott, Mrs. Bolger, Mrs. Hughes, Mrs. Augustien. Mrs. Alexander made a splendid report of the convention of the Seventeenth district, held Thursday of last week in San Mateo. She particularly mentioned the report given at that meeting on handicapped children. All members are to report any handicapped children that come to their attention and it will be seen that they are taken care of.

Mrs. Hughes was appointed a delegate to represent the Crocker P. T. A. at the state convention to be held at Sacramento the first part of May.

The date and location of the next whist party to be given by the association will be announced in the near future.

This being School Week, Prof. W. J. Savage gave a very interesting talk to the ladies and Mrs. L. L. Searles, executive secretary of the Oakland Camp Fire Girls, gave a delightful talk on Camp Fire Girl activities.

Miss Johnson's room having the most mothers present at the meeting, won the theatre party which will be given next Monday evening at the Daly City Theatre. Mrs. Reiman, Mrs. McDermott and Mrs. Alexander will serve on the committee in charge of the children at this affair.

WOULD RID COUNTY OF PEDDLER ACTIVITY

South San Francisco business men with representatives from other San Mateo county municipalities met in San Mateo on Wednesday evening of last week to find ways and means of ridding the county of unlicensed peddlers. The meeting was called at the request of the Merchants section of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce.

Ambrose McSweeney of South San Francisco, county tax collector, discussed the present county ordinance and pointed out the need for constructive revision, followed by close co-operation from the officers of the law.

At the meeting the foundation was laid for a county-wide merchants' association which would consist of representatives of the various smaller groups.

Such an organization, it was pointed out, could handle the problems affecting merchants in the county effectively.

It was the consensus of opinion at the meeting that much could be done in San Mateo county to prevent the encroachment upon the business man's trade by the house to house peddlers who operates without contributing to the city's taxes and merely takes what money he collects out of town.

INJUNCTION IS ISSUED TO WESTERN PACIFIC

The Western Pacific Railroad won the first and important round of its battle to prevent the Southern Pacific from blocking its right of way down the peninsula with spur tracks, when the United States District Court in San Francisco last Tuesday granted a preliminary injunction and denied the Southern Pacific application to dismiss the case.

Judge Frank Kerrigan denied every motion of the Southern Pacific attorneys and sent the case for a hearing before a special master. Judge William H. Hunt, formerly of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, was suggested by Judge Kerrigan as the special master. His appointment was approved by both Attorney Warren Olney, Jr., of the Western Pacific and Attorney C. J. Durbrow of the Southern Pacific.

Judge Hunt will take evidence to determine whether or not the injunction in force, first as a restraining order and now as a preliminary injunction, shall be made permanent. In the meantime the Southern Pacific is under orders of the United States courts to build no more spur tracks across the Western Pacific right of way until this case is finally adjudicated.

The action for an injunction was brought by the Western Pacific and the California Railroad after the Southern Pacific had built a spur not connected with the Southern Pacific main lines, but stretching aimlessly across the proposed Western Pacific right of way and the right of way of the Bay Shore boulevard in East San Mateo.

LOWER RATES FOR
AUTO INSURANCE

Reductions of from 30 to 50 per cent in the cost of automobile insurance for the residents of northern and central San Mateo county, with the exception of Daly City and South San Francisco, were made public on last Tuesday by insurance men. Reports were current that a further reduction will be granted April 29. Both refer to reclassification of a large part of the county, formerly included in the San Francisco area, for insurance purposes.

Full average coverage for a typical insurance on an automobile of a small well known make, as worked out by an insurance man, places the former rate at $43 as against the present rate of $23. The reduction was effective April 17, he said.

The drop is due principally to reclassification with regard to collision insurance and to a further "merit rating" which means a reduction of 10 per cent for all motorists who have not been required to pay claims on public liability or property damage during the past twenty-four months. There was a five point drop in the reclassification for this part of the county on collision insurance.

Predictions are current that there will be an appropriate reduction of 30 per cent in liability insurance next week, and a reduction of approximately 13 per cent in property damage insurance. Both will come from a reclassification of area, it was stated.

Will Speed Up Highway Projects

Plans for speeding up state highway projects that the state may assist in taking up the slack in employment resulting from the smaller fruit crop of next summer and fall have been announced by Bert M. Meek, state director of public works.

FIGHT FOR SAVE THE BEACHES BILL

A new attempt will be made by those favoring the Save-the-Beaches bill, it is expected. The measure lacked only one vote of the necessary two-thirds required in the test vote on April 8. The Assembly voted 40 yes and 28 no on the motion to bring the bill out of committee, where it had been tabled.

Crowell D. Eddy, Assemblyman from San Diego county, introduced the bill after years of successful application of a similar requirement as a local ordinance in San Diego county.

Mr. Eddy summarizes the purpose and provisions of his bill as follows: "The purpose of Assembly Bill No. 28, which has become known as 'Save the Beaches' bill is to make the beaches of California accessible to all the people instead of having them preempted by exclusive beach clubs and real estate speculators for private gain.

"The bill provides that if a subdivider, having land along the ocean, does not dedicate upon his map when filing it a passageway, as near as practical along the mean high tide line, then the board of supervisors, or other legislative body, shall start proceedings of condemnation for the possession of such passageway.

"Whether this passageway is obtained by dedication, gift or condemnation, the nature and width of it is at the discretion of the legislative body.

"This may be but a promenade, or where it will best serve the interests of the public, it may be a highway. This matter is entirely at the discretion of the legislative body.

"All of the land lying between this passageway and the ocean is to remain as public domain for park and playground purposes, for live-saving purposes, and for the possible moving of troops in time of war.

"This bill exempts all industrial frontage from its provisions, and further provides that any frontage to which the legislative body does not deem it advisable to have a passage way opened may be exempted.

"This provides that where beach clubs that would be formed or where other interests arise that would best serve the interests of the public, they may not be controlled by an arbitrary law."

SPORTSMEN PROMISED SOME GOOD FISHING

Clear and low water in many sections of the state assure good fishing for the opening of the trout season on May 1, while bad roads and heavy snow will keep anglers out of several good fishing regions. This is indicated in the official reports sent to the Division of Fish and Game by field deputies covering the entire state.

This information is gathered from authentic sources and passed on to anglers by the division in order that fishermen may be certain of conditions before starting out.

The headquarters at San Francisco warns all fishermen they must secure fishing licenses before attempting to take game fish. At any of the many places where licenses are sold, an abstract of the fish and game laws will be supplied and anglers are advised to familiarize themselves with the laws, limits, seasons, districts, etc., which are covered in the abstract.

Conditions at La Honda, San Gregorio, Pescadero, Butanos, Cazas and Guadalupe creek, near Los Gatos, it is reported are perfect. There are plenty of trout and the sports should have no trouble bagging the limit.

Other sections near here that will lure the anglers are Marin county and off San Quentin and Marin islands. The boat patrol plying off the islands report that striped bass are plentiful.

Santa Rosa streams also will prove a lure, with the fish running in large sizes.

EQUALLY IMPORTANT

A newly appointed diplomat, newly married, and his bride were being introduced to Chief Justice Taft back in 1910, when he was president. Wanting to get over as much information as possible in presenting them, the Congressman sponsoring them told the genial Chief Executive almost in the same breath that the young man should be felicitated for two reasons for winning such a lovely young wife and for getting a good berth in the foreign service.

But in the confusion and haste of shaking hands with so many who made up the long line of these gathering at the White House to meet the president on such reception days, the latter apparently got only one of the facts mentioned—regarding the young man's appointment to Berlin or Baghdad or somewhere—on which he was congratulated with the remark that "he was sure he would make good."

Noting that the president had grasped only one of the items, the Congressman repeated both and asked to which Mr. Taft referred. Arising to the occasion, as they all joined in a laugh at the young benedict's expense, the president added: "I think the bride will agree with me that it is equally important in both cases."

There are 146 telephone central offices serving Greater New York, 94 in the suburban area and 205 upstate, a total of 445 central offices in the area served by the New York Telephone Company.

AN ELECTRICAL TRAP

Science is aiding man's battle against insects in many ways. In fact, it is asserted that if it were not for the employment of scientific means in combating these insect pests they would in time overrun the earth and extinguish human life.

C. G. Quiggle has brought electricity to his aid in fighting the tomato worm moth on his big truck farm near Whistler, Alabama. His plan is briefly as follows:

On a three-acre tomato patch, 100-watt electric bulbs were strung at equal distances, with a 12-inch reflector above each light, and a shallow pan containing diluted kerosene underneath. The moths were attracted by the light, upon striking which they fell into the pan and were destroyed. Quite simple and effective; so effective, in fact, that Mr. Quiggle had only a negligible loss of tomatoes as a result, and the amount of electrical current used was comparatively inexpensive, considering the protection afforded his crop, being supplied at a reasonable rate in connection with the Alabama Power Company's program for the encouragement of farm electrification.

This is another illustration of what happens when mere instinct comes into collision with brains.

RED TAPE FOR CUPID

While certain publicists deplore the reluctance of young people to marry, other uplifters are busying themselves with plans for making it harder for those who are matrimonially inclined.

An example of the latter activity is seen in the recommendations of the Womens' City Club of New York, a committee of which has been investigating the subject. Among other things, it is recommended that girls under sixteen be not permitted to marry except upon consent of a judge. Also, that no one of any age be allowed to wed until five days after the license is issued.

California has a law which precludes the marriage service until three days have elapsed following the application for a marriage license. It is called by some of the facetious ones, "the gin marriage law." And it seems to work most satisfactorily.

Opponents of the recommendations of the New York women declare there may be sound logic back of the first restriction, but the wisdom of the latter is open to question.

A glance at the personnel of the investigating committee is hardly convincing as to its competency, however, to prescribe red tape for the restriction of Cupid. There are five members of the committee—all unmarried women.

WORLD'S LARGEST HALL

Atlantic City, New Jersey, with a population of about 60,000, has a building that will hold two-thirds of its permanent inhabitants. It is the great new convention hall, just completed, with a seating capacity of 40,000, the world's largest structure of its kind.

The hall covers an area 350 by 650 feet, located on the famous boardwalk, facing the Atlantic ocean, where as many as 400,000 visitors sometimes congregate on special occasions during the summer season.

The main auditorium is large enough for athletic games, indoor circuses, industrial exhibitions, and the great conventions, while a second hall, 130 by 185 feet, will be used for smaller conventions, dancing, banquets and the like.

Atlantic City's radio station is WGP, which local boosters declare stands for "world's greatest playground." The size of this new convention hall would indicate that their claim is well founded.

PADEREWSKI AND POKER

Like many other celebrities, the great Polish pianist Paderewski has been the subject of a good many humorous stories. One concerns the virtuoso's introduction to the great American game of draw poker.

On the pianist's first visit to America, Charley Schwartz, a gay spender of Chicago's sporting circles, engaged the talented Pole for a private musicale, for which he paid the artist $500. Schwartz's friends thought he had gone crazy to pay such a price for an evening's entertainment, but Schwartz merely smiled. He had heard that Paderewski wanted to learn poker.

After the musicale the host invited a few friends, including the pianist, to sit in a little game. At 3 a. m. the game broke up with Paderewski's $500 back in the pocket of his friend Schwartz. The concert had cost the gay host nothing, but Paderewski had gained some experience, if nothing else.

SAFE FOR DICTATORS

Ten years ago we thought that the World war had been fought to make the world safe for democracy. It now looks as though it made the world safe for autocracy. The intervening ten years has seen the rise of dictators in many lands, and their tribe seems to increase.

Mussolini in Italy, de Rivera in Spain, Kemal in Turkey, Pilsudski in Poland, Valdemaras in Lithuania, Zogu in Albania, and now Alexander in Jugo-Slavia have seized supreme power, and the first three have maintained it for a considerable period. In Russia the dictatorship of Stalin, although camouflaged by a pretense of popular approval, is more oppressive than that of the former czars. Carmona became virtually the dictator of Portugal in 1926. In several Latin-American countries the government is almost completely dominated by the individual who happens to be president for the time being.

So, looking back over the record of the past decade, one is forced to admit that if democracy was at stake in the world war, it fared rather badly.

YOUR BANK AND HOW TO USE IT

Foreign and Domestic Exchange

One ambitious banking student has described foreign and domestic exchange as "outside stuff." The definition may take in more territory than the particular function that it defines, perhaps, but in every other way it fits.

The transfer of money by telegraph, cable and mail; the issuance of cashier's checks and drafts against other banks; the issuance of travelers checks and letters of credit and the receipt and honoring of such obligations, constitute the chief functions of exchange as they affect the average customer. The system employed in the handling of foreign exchange is somewhat more complicated than that employed in the handling of domestic exchange because of coin and currency differences, but the mechanisms of both have been so highly developed that they work with equal ease.

A great deal is heard in these days about "correspondent banks." The exchange customer quickly realizes the vital part that banks play, for without them the present ease and simplicity of exchange transactions would be impossible. For instance, the Bank of Italy has a correspondent bank in Chicago with which it keeps a standing account. A customer of the Bank of Italy in Hollister desires to remit $50 or $100 to a friend, or relative, or firm in Chicago. He deposits the amount, plus transmission charges, with the Exchange Department.

The Chicago correspondent is advised by wire or mail to make the payment, which it does from the Bank of Italy account on its books. The amount deposited with the Bank of Italy exchange department by the customer is therefore credited to the account of the Chicago bank, as the Bank of Italy is its correspondent in San Francisco. No money has been shipped or has left either bank until payment of the draft is made. No charges have been taken. Still, all parties have been satisfied in a transaction that might have taken but a few minutes. Speed, Simplicity, Service are the other names for exchange.

The primary foreign exchange transaction works the same way. The Hollister man sends $50 to his mother in Stockholm, for instance. The request for payment is made on the Stockholm correspondent by telegraph and cable or through a draft in the mails, the sending bank previously having been paid the transmission charges plus the existing exchange rate.

It is usually arranged to have the draft made out in the coin or currency of the country to which it is sent. This does away with the necessity of having to pay any exchange rate for converting the money at the point where the draft is honored. It is not always possible however to do this with some types of draft, such as travelers checks, as they may be cashed in many different countries.

The customer who obtains a draft for payment in a foreign country should remember that he will save money if he has the draft cashed in the city where the correspondent bank is located. If it is necessary for such correspondent to arrange for the cashing or delivery of the draft at some point distant from its place of business, it naturally must charge for such service.

The customer who is traveling and who wishes a supply of the coin or currency of the countries to which he is going, may be accommodated at the exchange department. He may have his domestic money converted into the money that he desires, the bank charging only the usual rate. This accommodation is not often asked for, however, as it is much more convenient to carry paper, particularly in the case of travelers checks; this paper is non-negotiable if stolen. The department will also purchase foreign currencies and coins the same as it purchases foreign checks and drafts and will issue foreign money orders.

There are many features of exchange which, although interesting, touch the banking customer only indirectly. The operation of the exchange market, in which the moneys of the world are bought and sold, are in every way as exciting as the activities of the stock market. The balance of trade, whereby proper ratios are maintained between exports and imports on the one hand and money payments, shipments and balances on the other, is a vital but more or less detached issue. The chief interest of the exchange customer is to get his personal or mercantile payment transferred from place to place as quickly as possible, at a minimum of risk and at the lowest possible rate, and the highly developed processes of exchange make all this possible for him.

His last pint of gasoline probably saved the life of Capt. F. R. McCall, Canadian war ace, now a civilian aviator. Piloting a plane loaded with nitroglycerin which he was transporting from Great Falls, Mont., to Calgary, his gas ran low and he was faced with the possibility of having to make a forced landing. Conserving the precious fuel as best he could, he managed to reach the landing field just as the supply was exhausted.

Wisconsin voted in favor of the fluid that made Milwaukee famous.

Chapter III

The steps by which Halliday solved the murder at the main house, and with it the mystery which had preceded it, constitute an interesting story in themselves. So certain was he that by the time we were ready for the third scene, his material was already in the hands of the district attorney. And it was not the material he had given to Greenough.

For the solution of a portion of the mystery, then, one must go back to the main house, and consider the older part of it. It is well known that many houses of that period were provided with hidden passages, by which the owners hoped to escape the excise. Such an attempt, many years ago, had cost George Pierce his life.

But the passage leading from the old kitchen, now the den, to a closet in the room above it, had been blocked up for many years. The builder was dead; by all the laws of chance time might have gone on and the passage remained undiscovered.

In 1899, however, Eugenia Riggs bought the property, and in making repairs the old passage was discovered. Although she denied using it for fraudulent purposes, neither Halliday nor I doubt that she did so. She points to the plastered wall as her defense, but Halliday assures me that a portion of the baseboard, hinged to swing out, but locked from within, would have allowed easy access to the cabinet.

But Halliday had at the beginning no knowledge of this passage, with its ladder to the upper floor. He reached it by pure deduction.

"It had to be there," he says modestly. "And it was."

Up to the time young Gordon was attacked at the kitchen door, however, Halliday was frankly at sea. That is, he had certain suspicions, but that was all. He had discovered, for instance, that the cipher found in my garage was written on the same sort of bond paper as that used by Gordon, by the simple expedient of having Annie Cochran get him a sheet of it, on some excuse or other.

But his actual case began, I believe, with that attack on Gordon. At least he began at that time definitely to associate the criminal with the house.

"There was something fishy about it," is the way he puts it.

And with Bethel's story to me, forced by his fear that the boy knew it was he who had attacked him, the belief that it was "fishy" gained ground.

"Gordon was knocked out," he says. "And that ought to have been enough. But it was not. He was tied, too, tied while he was still unconscious. Somebody wasn't taking a chance that he'd get back into the house very soon."

It was that "play for time," as he terms it, that made him suspicious.

All this time, of course, he was ignorant of any underlying motive; he makes it clear that he simply began, first to associate the crimes with the house, and then with Bethel. He kept going back to his copy of the unfinished letter, but:

"It didn't help much," he says quietly. "Only, there was murder indicated in it. And we were having murder."

He had three clues, two of them certain, one doubtful. The certain ones were the linen from the oarlock of the boat, torn from a sheet belonging to the main house, and the small portion of the cipher. The one he was not certain about was the lens from an eyeglass, outside the culvert.

He began to watch the house; he "didn't get" Gordon in the situation at all; there was no situation there, really; nothing, that is, that he could lay his hand on. But on the night I called him and he started toward Robinson's point, as he came back toward the house he saw the figure of a man, certainly not Gordon, enter the house by the gunroom window. When he got there the window was closed and locked.

He was puzzled. He looked around for me, but I was not in sight. Still searching for me, he made a round of the house, and so was on the terrace when I fired the shot. From that time on he saw Bethel somehow connected with the mystery, but only as the brains.

"There was some devil's work about," he said. "But always I came up against that paralysis of his. He had to have outside help."

On the night in question, then, he was certain that this accomplice was still in the house through all that followed; through Hayward's arrival and Starr's. He was so certain by that time of Gordon's innocence that he very nearly took him into his confidence the next day. But he was afraid of the boy; he was not dependable; Halliday had an idea that "he was playing his own game."

But if this man was in the house that night, where was he?

He grew suspicious of the den, after that, and he found out through Starr the name of the builder who had put in the paneling in the den, for Uncle Horace. It was a long story, but in the end he learned something.

Tearing the old baseboard prior to putting up the panels, the builder had happened on the old passage to the room overhead, and he had called Horace Porter's attention to it. It seems to have appealed to the poor old chap; it belonged, somehow, to the room, with the antique stuff he was putting into it. He built in a sliding panel; it was not a particularly skillful piece of work, but it answered. And he kept his secret, at least from me.

I doubt if he ever used it, until prohibition came in. Then, no drinker himself, he put there a small and choice supply of liquor, some of which we found later on. And one bottle of which placed Halliday in peril of his life, a day or so after the night I had fired the shot into the hall.

He had borrowed Annie Cochran's key to the kitchen door, and after midnight entered the house and went to the den. Although he is reticent about this portion of it, I gather that the house was not all it should be that night.

"You know the sort of thing," he says.

But, pressed as to that, he admits that he was hearing small and inexplicable sounds from the library. Chairs seemed to move, and once he was certain that the curtain in the doorway behind him blew out into the room. When he looked back over his shoulder, however, it was hanging as before.

He had no trouble in finding the panel, and as carefully as he could he stepped inside. But he had touched one of the bottles and it fell over.

"It didn't make much noise," he says, "but it was enough. He was awake, and paralysis or no paralysis, I hadn't time to move before he was in the closet overhead, and opening the trap in the floor."

He had not had time to move, and even if he had, there were the infernal bottles all around him. So he stood without breathing, waiting for he knew not what.

"Things looked pretty poor," he says. "I didn't know when he'd strike a match and see me. And it was good night if he did!"

But Bethel had no match, evidently. He stood listening intently, and in the darkness below Halliday held his breath and waited. Then Bethel moved. He left the trap door above open and went for a light, and Halliday crawled out and closed the panel quietly.

From that time on, however, he knew Bethel was no more helpless than he was. He abandoned the idea of an accomplice, and concentrated on the man himself.

Annie Cochran was working with him; that is, she did what he asked her, although she seems not to have known at any time the direction in which he was working. Her own mind was already made up; she believed Gordon to be guilty. She made no protest, however, when he asked her to break Mr. Bethel's spectacles one early morning, and give him the fragments. But she did it, pretending afterward that she had thrown the pieces into the stove.

Bethel was watchful and suspicious by that time, and she had a bad time of it, but what is important here is that Halliday took the fragments into the city, and established beyond a doubt that they and the piece of a lens found near the culvert were made from the same prescription.

And he had no more than made his discovery, when Gordon, attempting at last the blackmail which he had been threatening, was put out of the way as quickly and ruthlessly as had been poor Peter Carroway.

"Twenty-four hours," Halliday says bitterly, "and we would have saved him."

But twenty-four hours later Bethel had made good his escape, and everything was apparently over.

But from that time Bethel as Bethel, ceased to exist for Halliday.

He was not working alone, however. Very early, he had realized that he needed assistance, real assistance. Annie Cochran's help was always of the below-stairs order. And he found the help he wanted after the night Gordon was attacked. In Hayward, as a matter of fact, it was Hayward who went to him.

"He was worried about you, Skipper," Halliday says, with a grin. "He considered it quite possible that the attempt to wrangle English literature into too many brain corals might have driven you slightly mad."

On the night, then, when Gordon was hurt, the doctor was impulsively on his way to Halliday and the boat-house.

"He came within an inch of having you locked up that night," says Halliday.

Later on, he did go to Halliday, and Halliday then and there enlisted him in his service. He was not shrewd, but he was willing and earnest, and from that time on he was useful. He had started, presumably, on his vacation but actually on a very different errand, when the murder at the main house occurred, and Halliday recalled him by wire.

But when he returned, it was, at Halliday's request, to hide in the Livingstone house. It was from there that he came, at night, to assist Halliday in guarding the main house.

One perceives, of course, that the Livingstones had been brought into the case. Dragged in, is the way Halliday puts it. But after the first conference between the doctor and himself they were in it, willy nilly.

"Who," Halliday asked Hayward, referring to his copy of my Uncle Horace's letter, "were likely to have access to Horace Porter at night?"

"No one, so far as I know. The Livingstones, possibly."

"Then the man who came in while he was writing this letter might have been Livingstone?"

"He was ill that night. I was with him."

"Then Livingstone's out," said Halliday, and turned in a new direction.

"Some theory, some wickedness, was put up to him. And it horrified and alarmed him. A man doesn't present such a theory without leading up to

"They'd Denied Any Knowledge of the Passage Before That."

it. Let's try this: what subject was most interesting Horace Porter during the last years, or months, of his life? "Spiritism, I imagine. I know he was working on it."

"Alone? A man doesn't work that sort of thing alone, as a rule."

"I'll ask Mrs. Livingstone, if you like. She may know."

And ask the Livingstones he did, with the result that Halliday got his first real clue, and elaborated the daring theory which culminated in that fatal fall from the ladder, in the secret passage on the tragic night of the 10th of September.

All this time, of course, it remained only a theory. Hayward scouted it at first, but came to it later on; the Livingstones offered a more difficult problem.

"They didn't want to be involved," Halliday says. "But after Edith's letter came I more or less had them. And of course after he'd tried to get into the house, and left the print of his hand on the window board, they had to come in. They'd denied any knowledge of the passage before that. But he knew it as well as I did, or better, and that there was a chance old Bethel knew it, too, and had used it."

This letter of Edith's, to which I have already referred, runs as follows: "Dear Madam: I have read your article with great interest, and would like to suggest that a good medium might be very useful under the circumstances."

"You have one of the best in the country in your vicinity. She has retired, and is now living under another name somewhere in the vicinity of Oakville."

"When I knew her she was known as Eugenia Riggs, but this was her maiden name, which she had retained. Her husband's name is Livingstone; I do not know his initials."

"She has abandoned the profession in which she made so great a success, but I understand is still keenly interested."

The letter is not signed. . . .

He could not secure the arrest of a man because his lens prescription was the same as the murderer's. Or on the strength of an unsigned book manuscript left behind the wall of the den. He could not prove that Maggie Morrison had died in the process of the experiment. Gordon had puzzled over, because the mud on the truck wheels corresponded with the red iron-clay of the lane into the main house. He could not prove his own interpretation of the abbreviations S. and G. T. so liberally scattered through the diary. And he could not prove that it was Bethel who, looking for the broken lens in or near the culvert, had found my fountain pen there. A fact which Gordon had noted in the Journal as follows: "I have them now, sure. W. P. was here last night and left his fountain pen."

But he could, through the Livingstones, take a chance on proving all these things. And, against Livingstone's protests and fears, prove it he did.

"As a matter of fact," he says, "they were in a bad position themselves, and they knew it. They had to come over again!"

Things were, indeed, rather parlous for the Livingstones. "As a matter of fact," Halliday says cheerfully, "I gave the police a very pretty case against them. It was all there, according to Greenough. Even to the hand-print!"

But he held them off. He had done what he wanted, turned the police along a false trail and was free once more to travel along the true one. And in this he says, and I believe, that his purpose was not mercenary.

"The situation was peculiar," he says. "The slightest slip, the faintest suspicion, and he was off."

And he goes back again to the subtlety and wariness of the criminal himself; so watchful, so wary, that throughout it had even been necessary to keep me in ignorance.

"You had to carry on, Skipper," he says. "In a way, the whole thing hung on you. Even then, you nearly wrecked us once."

Which was, he tells me the night of the second seance, when the criminal actually fell into the trap and entered the house. Livingstone was on guard upstairs that night, and everything would have ended then probably.

"But you spilled the beans!" he accuses me.

From the first the seances were devised for a purpose, and I gather that some of the phenomena were deliberately faked, in pursuit of that purpose. On the other hand, Mrs. Livingstone has always been firm in her statement that "things happened" which she cannot explain. The sounds in the library, the lights and the arrival of the book on the table are among them.

But trickery or genuine psychic manifestations, in the end they served their purpose. I called the third seance, and the mystery was solved.

It is not surprising that my memory of those last few moments is a clouded one; I was, of all those present except the police, the only one in complete ignorance of the meaning of what was going on about me. Edith knew, and was bravely taking her risk with the others; even my dear Jane knew a little; no wonder she required her smelling salts.

Actually, out of the confusion, only two pictures remain in my mind: One was of Greenough staring at Livingstone, and then jerking aside the curtains of the cabinet, where Halliday and Hayward had opened the panel and after turning on the red globe hanging there, were stooping over a body at the bottom of the ladder.

The other is of that figure at the foot of the stairs.

I know now that it could not have been there; that it was lying, dead of a broken neck, at the foot of the ladder. I have heard all the theories, but I cannot reconcile them with the fact. How could I have imagined it? I did not know then who was inside the wall.

I am not a spiritist, but once in every man's life comes to him the one experience which he can explain by no law of nature as he understands them.

To every man his ghost, and to me, mine.

In the dim light of the red lamp, dead though he was behind the panel, I will swear that I saw Cameron, alias Simon Bethel, standing at the foot of the stairs and looking up.

Chapter IV

Who are we to judge him? If a man sincerely believes that there is no death, the taking of life to prove it must seem a trivial thing.

He may feel, and from his book manuscript hastily hidden behind the wall of the den we gather he did feel, that the security of the individual counted as nothing against the proof of survival to the human race.

But that he was entirely sane, in those last months, none of us can believe. Cruelty is a symptom of the borderland between sanity and madness; so, too, is the weakening of what we call the Herd instinct. It is well known at the University that for the year previous to his death he had been distinctly anti-social.

Certainly, too, he fulfilled the axiom that insanity is the exaggeration of one particular mental activity. And that he combined this single exaggeration with a high grade of intelligence only proves the close relation between madness and genius; Kant, unable to work unless gazing at a ruined tower; Hawthorne, cutting up his bits of paper; Wagner's periodical violences.

The very audacity of his disguise, the consistency with which he lived the part he was playing, points to what I believe is called dissociation; toward the last there seems to have been a genuine duality of personality: during the day old Simon Bethel, dragging his helpless foot and without effort holding his withered hand to its spastic contraction; at night, the active Cameron, making his exits on his nocturnal adventures by the gunroom window; wandering about incredible distances; watching the door of Gordon's room and locking him in; learning from me of Halliday's interest in the case, and trying to burn him out; very early realizing the embarrassment of my own presence at the Lodge, and warning me away by that letter from Salem, Ohio.

It seems clear that he had not expected me at the Lodge; Larkin apparently told Gordon, but Gordon neglected to inform him. Just what he felt, what terror and anger, when I greeted him at the house on his arrival will never be known. I remember now how he watched me, peering at me through his disguising spectacles, with the beef cube in his hand, and waiting. Waiting.

But the disguise held. My own very slight acquaintance with him, my near-sightedness, my total lack of suspicion, all were in his favor. And of the perfection of the disguise, it is enough to say that Gordon apparently never suspected it. He did suspect the paralysis.

"He moved his arm today," he wrote once, in the diary. "He knows I saw it, and he has watched me ever since."

"It takes very little to change an appearance beyond casual recognition," Halliday tells me. "The idea is to take a few important points and substitute their opposites. Take a man with partial paralysis; one side of his face drops, you see. Well, he can't imitate that, but he can put a fig in the other cheek and raise it. Put hair on a bald-headed man, and watch the change. And there are other things; eyebrows now—"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Under the reign of Queen Elizabeth parliament often implored the Queen to get married, something that parliament never asked of her father Henry VIII. It is true, of course, that in the latter case the intervention of parliament was not absolutely necessary.

O' Dobbin

O horse, you are a wonderful thing; no buttons to push, no horns to honk; you start yourself, no clutch to slip; no spark to miss, no gears to strip; no license-buying every year, with plates to screw on front and rear; no gas bills climbing up each day, stealing the joy of motoring away; no speed cops chugging in your rear, yelling summons in your ear. Your inner tubes are all O. K. and, bless your heart, they stay that way; your spark plugs never miss and fuss, the way they do in some old bus. Your frame is good for many a mile; your body never changes style. Your wants are few and easy met; you're something on the auto yet—American Forests and Forest Life.

Examiners at times cite with a sigh of melancholy some of the absurd answers they receive. Under this heading, Australian schoolboys take no second place to American youths.

Here are some samples taken from answers at an examination of the graduating class of a Sydney high school: "The British admiral, Sir Francis Drake, is famous for having discovered the invisible armada," and "In the European monasteries of the Thirteenth century the monks had tea in common. This was their principal distraction. Seldom they visited the theater or the cinema."

One boy answered the question "What was the chief event in the reign of Queen Elizabeth?" with the words:

Installment Plan Old

The system of purchasing on the installment plan can be traced back to antiquity. Crassus, a contemporary of Julius Caesar, is said to have made a fortune by building houses outside of Rome and selling them on the installment plan. The present system is known to have existed a century ago. It was during the last decade that tremendous expansion in sales and industries in installment buying occurred.

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. To Make It Pull Albert D. Lasker, former head of the shipping board, is a very successful advertising man, and at a luncheon at Chicago he gave some good advice to young copy advertisement writers.

"Write pulling copy," he said, "but in your desire to make it pull don't make it absurd or incredible. Some young writers do."

"Yes, some of the advertisements that are submitted to me recall the lawyer who put a notice on his door: 'Out to lunch. Back in an hour.'"

"He was a struggling young lawyer, and he didn't want to lose any clients who might turn up in his absence; so he added to the notice: 'Been gone 50 minutes already.'"

ALL ARE WRITERS NOW

It is the simplest thing in the world to win fame as a writer nowadays—provided you have won fame in some other way first. The newspapers and magazines bristle with articles by this or that celebrity, and it begins to look as though famous folks are going to monopolize the printed page, to the exclusion of professional writers.

But there's a catch in it. In most cases the famous folks do not write the articles which they are supposed to write. They merely give a regular writer an outline of what they want to say, and he does the rest. When the work is finished, the celebrity gives it his O. K., and it is published as his own.

Of course there are many prominent men and women who actually write articles and books which bear their names, but in the case of many stage people, pugilists and other sport champions, politicians and even business men, the actual writing is usually done by a professional, known as a "ghost writer."

Literary efforts by proxy appear to be quite remunerative, however, particularly if they run to testimonials endorsing cigarettes and the like.

PICTURES AND RED TAPE

News pictures of the recent Foch funeral in Paris got entangled with government red tape in New York City and were thereby delayed about twelve hours in reaching newspaper readers, much to the disgust of editors who had spent a lot of money to get them quickly.

The ship bearing the pictures arrived in the evening after custom house hours, so the reporters on hand to receive them were told that there would be nothing doing until the next morning at 8 o'clock.

The officials followed a too common habit of hiding behind government regulations in order to avoid giving service to the public. They evidently decided that regulations, no matter how foolish, must be slavishly followed. If red tape conflicts with common sense, then common sense must stand aside.

Now it is suggested that we observe a "Think More Week." It would be a noble experiment for some.

PRINTING THE NEWS

When to print a disagreeable story and when to leave one out of the paper is one of the most troublesome problems of an editor. In the case of a person who is unfaithful to a public trust, or one who is guilty of a serious crime, it is not difficult to decide, because the public interest, as well as the public's right to have the news, demands that it be printed.

There are some cases, however, in which the offense is entirely of a personal nature, and in which publishing the story would bring sorrow and embarrassment to innocent persons without serving any beneficial purpose. In these the making of a proper decision is often not easy. If the story is printed, relatives and friends of the person concerned will feel that it was unnecessary. If it is suppressed, the scandal-mongers will be disappointed, and many will insinuate that the editor was "bought off."

These same scandal-mongers would howl the loudest, however, if their own shady actions should be held up to public gaze.

So, it is hard to please everybody, and no editor of sense tries to please everybody. He must let his own judgment and conscience be his guide. He will not go far wrong by following the rule laid down by the late President Harding for the guidance of his newspaper, the Marion Star, which was this:

"If any item comes in that would cast ignominy on some innocent woman or child, don't wait for somebody to suppress it, but suppress it."

PROHIBITION STRIFE

It would take an inspired prophet, indeed, to predict what shall be the outcome of the strife over prohibition, which appears to be more violent than ever. Both "wets" and "drys" claim that their respective sides are making headway, and both can point to facts which seem to justify their contentions—provided each side selects the particular facts at which he points.

Intimations from Washington are to the effect that President Hoover may have difficulty in selecting his commission on law enforcement, as he doubtless desires to appoint fair-minded men, whose standing will inspire the confidence of the country.

But where can high-class men be found who can justly be said to be impartial in this matter? Practically every thoughtful person in the United States has made up his mind concerning prohibition, one way or the other, by this time. Those who believe prohibition can ultimately be enforced in a reasonable degree will stick to prohibition. Those who believe that it is already a failure will not be disposed to favor its continuance, although they realize the difficulty of making any material change in the federal law.

Truly, there is not much in the present situation to give comfort to either side. It looks as though the battle must continue indefinitely.

OUR TRADE WITH RUSSIA

One of the principal arguments advanced by those who would have the United States recognize the Soviet government of Russia is that such recognition would lead to increased trade with that country. A good many have been convinced by this argument. But let us look at the facts as stated in an official report just made public by the Soviet government itself.

Before the war, Russian-American trade was about $48,000,000 annually. Last year it reached a total of $111,000,000, of which $96,717,000 represented Russian purchases in the United States. The United States now stands second in its trade with Russia, Germany being first. In the last two years Russian imports from the United States increased 50 per cent, while those from England decreased 65 per cent.

The reasons for non-recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States are that Russia refuses to pay war debts to this country amounting to more than $300,000,000, besides which $400,000,000 worth of American property was confiscated during the war; also, the dissemination of Communist propaganda in the United States is looked upon with disfavor by our people.

In the meantime, our trade with that country is not being hindered, as the official figures above quoted conclusively show.

PRINCE'S PLAY DAYS END

Although King George may have several years of life yet before him, as everyone hopes, there is grave doubt that he will ever again be able to resume his duties as British sovereign. It is believed that the Prince of Wales will shortly be made regent and assume the kingly office.

Already he has performed some of the royal functions as a member of the present council of regency, and he has recently taken several significant steps in preparation for the responsibilities which will soon be his. One of these is seen in the sale of all but one of his twelve fine horses, which indicates that his days of care-free play are at an end.

Perhaps no ruler ever came to the throne of England with so firm a hold on the affections of his people as the Prince of Wales enjoys, or with more sincere admirers throughout the world. His wide travels have won countless friends for himself and for the British commonwealth, which will stand him in good stead in the years to come.

A FEW LEADERS CONTROL

Minimizing the importance of the reapportionment of membership in the House of Representatives, Senator Thomas of Oklahoma declares that it really does not matter how many members there are, as four or five men run things anyway.

This is doubtless true. So far as legislation is concerned, the average Congressman has very little influence, and all the brave speeches made on the floor change few votes, if any. The leaders decide what legislation is to be passed, and if they find they can not command enough votes to put a measure through, they just sidetrack it and await a more favorable time.

Hundreds of bills are introduced which their proposers well know have not the slightest chance of enactment, but these gestures sometimes impress folks back home, and when they fail there is always a plausible alibi ready. Every Congressman performs much useful work in Washington for his constituents, however, in looking after matters before the various executive departments and bureaus. Most of them are able to get a new post-office building or an appropriation of some kind for their districts occasionally, which adds to their prestige.

But, so far as influencing general legislation is concerned, a few members are in command, it is charged.

Charles Zipser, of Berkeley, was a visitor in Colma last week, saying goodbye to his mother, Mrs. M. Zipser, before leaving on a trip to Los Angeles.

The picnic given last Sunday at Lovchen Garden by the Colma Fire Department was a huge success. Young as well as old spent a delightful day. There was dancing for the young folks and games for the children. The firemen surely deserve the support of this community, as they are an active body of men who are always trying to help in every way they can.

RAILROADS ENTER TRAFFIC AGREEMENT

The construction of the 200 miles of railroad between Paxton or Keddie, California, and Klamath Falls, Oregon, which will connect the 8,500 miles of the Great Northern with the Western Pacific and thus effect the entrance into California, with its attendant advantages to the state, of the strong, well-financed and aggressive Great Northern Railway system, will be made more desirable and of extreme value by an agreement which has just been entered into by the Santa Fe, Western Pacific and Great Northern.

Under this agreement, which is the result of a meeting held recently in San Francisco by officials representing the three railroads, through passenger fares and freight rates are, as soon as the connecting line is constructed and placed in operation, to be established between points on the Santa Fe, particularly points in California, Arizona and New Mexico, and points on the Great Northern including points in Oregon, Washington, Northern Idaho, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota, and in Canada. Through fares and rates will also be established to and from points on lines connecting with the Great Northern, the details of which have not been worked out.

It is also anticipated that through fares and rates will be established to and from points on lines connecting with the Santa Fe.

REALTY FIRM REVEALS DEBTS

Assets of $2,900,702 and a total debt of $826,279 were disclosed in a schedule submitted to United States district court last Wednesday by the Municipal Properties Company, Inc., which recently filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. The company, which promoted the "Devonshire Hills," near San Carlos, states that of its total assets, $2,861,569 consist of real estate holdings with several thousand lots in the Devonshire Hills, 1,164 acres near Marysville, and a tract near Warm Springs. About 200 creditors are listed, to whom amounts ranging from $10 to $50,000 are said to be owing.

EDUCATOR APPOINTED RED CROSS DIRECTOR

Announcement of the appointment of Charles A. Harwell, of Berkeley, as assistant national director of Junior Red Cross for the Pacific area, to succeed Miss Eva Hance, who is resigning after having filled that position since 1923, was made today by J. Arthur Jeffers, Pacific Coast manager of the Red Cross.

Mr. Harwell is a graduate of the University of California and took postgraduate work at Stanford University and at Teachers College, Columbia University.

Mr. Harwell has been active in the field of education in and about Berkeley for several years, having served as supervising principal of schools in San Leandro, then for four years as principal of Emerson School, Berkeley. For the past three years he has been principal of Thousand Oaks School, Berkeley, which post he resigned to accept the appointment in the Pacific Branch of the Red Cross.

The Berkeley Board of Education granted Mr. Harwell a leave of absence in order that he might attend the National Convention of the American Red Cross in Washington, D. C., from April 22 to 25. He will assume his new duties in San Francisco on July 1.

SIDELIGHTS

Mayor Flowers, of Dothan, Ala., thinks generosity can be carried too far. Recently approached by a man who said he had lost everything in the recent flood except two mules which he had with him, the mayor bought the animals in order to help the fellow out. The man cashed the check and disappeared. A few hours later a well-known farmer appeared and claimed the mules, which had been stolen from his farm by the party of the first part.

Now it is rumored that Charlie Chaplin and his divorced wife, Lita Grey, who got on the front page some time ago through their domestic troubles, have made up and will get married again. Which may interest anyone who cares.

Pope Pius XI gave an elaborate luncheon recently to diplomats accredited to the Holy See, an unusual occurrence. What would appear to the laymen as even more unusual is that the Pope himself did not appear to enjoy the repast, even though he was not ill. His non-appearance was not in the nature of a slight to his guests, however, but in conformity with a tradition that the Holy Father shall not eat in the presence of others. He was represented by his secretary of state.

Celebrating the 25th anniversary of his restaurant, Mathias Wolthut served meals at the same price charged 25 years ago. A dinner of hors d'oeuvres, soup, boiled beef, roast pork and cabbage, a pint of beer or wine, and coffee, was dispensed for 10 cents. The rush was so great that police had to be called to keep order. We almost omitted to mention that this happened in Budapest.

Gene Tunney turned toreador temporarily while on a visit to Seville and after brief training slew a bull with one sword thrust. In justice to the bull, the magazine Time states that the animal was "old and feeble."

Possibly there's nothing in a name, but some of them do not suggest sweetness. Anyway, a dispatch from Guelph, Ontario, chronicles the fact that "Orval Shaw, notorious bandit of Skunk's Misery, paid a flying visit to Guelph to greet some of his former colleagues."

President Hoover nursed a sore arm a few days ago after an excess of handshaking, and the White House has asked Congressmen to send fewer of their constituents to pump the presidential arm. One Democratic Senator sent 188 in one day, which looks like dirty politics.

TELEPHONE OPERATOR SAVES VALUED VIRGINIA RECORDS

Some of the oldest records in existence in the state of Virginia, including various deeds and papers executed before the Revolutionary War, together with much information concerning original English families, were saved from destruction by fire recently through quick action on the part of Mrs. Annie M. Taylor, telephone operator at Eastville, Va., who on her own initiative summoned aid from neighboring towns and called citizens. Mrs. Taylor is credited with being instrumental also in saving the Eastville business section as well as the Eastville Court House. It was in the Eastville Court House, the Northampton County seat, that these valuable old records and papers were kept.

Helen Terwilliger, 13, of Walden, N. Y., has received much publicity because she detected by radio an error made by Chief Justice Taft in repeating the oath of office administered to President Hoover, and wrote him about it. Mr. Taft acknowledged his mistake.

SOME ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

A complaint filed with the Railroad Commission with the city of Burlingame protesting the rates charged for street lighting service by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, was dismissed without prejudice by the commission following an announcement that Burlingame had reached an agreement with the company.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Imbiuglia, 76 and 74 years old respectively, have sworn out warrants in Oakland for the arrest of seven of their nine grown sons and daughters. The aged couple, who reared their large family through long, toilsome years, charge the seven with failure to properly support them.

A new bill to transfer control of San Francisco harbor from the state to the city is before the legislature. Introduced by Senator Roy Felleman, San Francisco, the measure would create a "San Francisco port authority" of three members, appointed by the governor.

Mrs. Edna Sharp, kidnaper of four-year-old Doris Virginia Murphy, of San Francisco, was sentenced to San Quentin prison for from one to twenty years and was taken to prison last Friday.

Eight children of David Sylvester Jackson, Pescadero pioneer, who died April 1, will share in his estate, amounting to $10,000.

Richfield Oil Company of California has increased its production 8,000 barrels daily through the completion of three wells in the Signal Hills field, according to word coming from Los Angeles.

A higher tariff on bean importation was urged in telegrams sent to United States Senators Hiram Johnson and Samuel Shortridge by state senators and assemblymen last Wednesday.

The Chrysler Motor Corporation will build a huge plant in Oakland, it was announced Wednesday by the Oakland Chamber of Commerce.

Charging that the measure is "impracticable, unworkable and a hardship on every automobile owner," the motor car dealers of the bay area are opposing Senate Bill No. 511, providing cancellation of motor vehicle registration for non-payment of personal taxes.

MELODRAMA OF CROOKS AT EMBASSY THEATRE

"Kid Gloves," a fast moving melodrama of crooks and the underworld, is now showing at the Embassy Theatre, San Francisco. This is an original story written by Warner Brothers scenarists for the talents of Conrad Nagel, whose final appearance is made on the Vitaphone with this picture.

In "Kid Gloves," the actor is seen as a polished safe-cracker of the underworld. On one of his midnight jobs he encounters a wealthy society girl and a romance ensues. She decides to give up everything and live with him, to the utter dismay of her friends and her family. Influence is brought to bear on the couple and the complications which ensue build up a tremendous climax.

If John Landis of Chicago is ever blown up he doesn't want it to happen by mistake. So when he bought the home of former Chief of Police Fitzmorris, which had been bombed several times by gangsters, Landis asked the newspapers to state that he, and not Fitzmorris, now lives in the place.

OUTSTANDING FILM NOVELTY AT MARION DAVIES THEATRE

"Hearts in Dixie," the special Movietone production now at the Marion Davies Theatre, bids to be the outstanding film novelty of the year. The story deals with plantation people in the South a few years after the Civil war. It embodies the happy, care-free life of plantation workers, with their songs, dances, loves, desires, superstitions and beliefs. It tells of a people who have never outgrown a child-like love of play and laughter, a people who are but a few generations away from the jungle of fear and superstition. "Hearts in Dixie" presents the songs of the cotton fields and the inspiring spirituals in which the southerners bare their souls to a love of melody. The dances

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

Talking Mountains Found

Undersea mountains that just could not get silent, have yielded their secret to the persistent scientists. By firing detonating shells from a brass shotgun and determining the time the echoes took to return from the floor of the sea, scientists on the non-magnetic yacht Carnegie found two new ranges of mountains. One is more than a mile high above the sea floor near Ecuador. The other rises 9,750 feet, about 400 miles north of Juan Fernandez Island. This range may be a contributing cause to the Humboldt current, and may also be the remnant of a sunken land whence sprang the mysterious Easter Island civilization.

Lemon Production

A Chinese type of cold resistant lemon tree has been introduced in the Satsuma orange belt of Alabama and Mississippi with excellent results. It is slightly less hardy than the Satsuma orange, but has a more rapid recovery when nipped by the cold.

Solution

A woman driver ran into an embankment and bent a fender. It worried her. So she went to a garage and asked the mechanic:

"Can you fix this fender so my husband won't know it was bent?"

The mechanic looked at the bent fender and then at her and said:

"No, lady, I can't. But I tell you what I can do. I can fix it up so that in a few days you can ask your husband how he bent it."—Life.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Plans for the new Humboldt County Hospital have been approved by the Supervisors. Bids will be received up to May 14 and the cost has been estimated at more than $200,000.

The Placerville road is in splendid shape from Placerville to about a mile beyond Riverton, according to the California State Automobile Association. Thence to Strawberry the road is a little rough. It is open as far as Twin Bridges.

William West, with a cork leg, limped into F. W. Adron's cigar store in Chico and limped out with a "leg full" of watches, fountain pens, cigarette lighters and tobacco. He was caught and sentenced to eighteen months in the county jail.

Century-old pear trees are making way for the march of progress in San Rafael's business district. The trees, planted by the Mission Fathers in 1817, are being cut down to clear sites for business buildings.

Pacific Gas and Electric Company, which recently acquired properties of Novato Utilities Company in the town of Novato, Marin County, applied to the railroad commission for authority to substitute its own electric rates for those of the acquired company. It is estimated the new rates will result in a saving of 15 per cent to electric consumers.

Plans are being made for the construction of a $2,000,000 terminal at Mission Rock to be used as a free port terminal for the handling of raw materials for export in event Congress passes a bill now pending to create a free port or zone in San Francisco Bay.

The state mining bureau announced the finding of two large nuggets. An $1800 nugget was found by George Noonan in his Quartz Hill placer mine near Yreka, while another nugget, weighing more than two pounds, was picked up by Ham Collins at the Frog Pond mine in Eldorado county a few days later.

Improvement of the highway from White Hill, Marin county, to Point Reyes voted by the Marin county Board of Supervisors and a contract let to J. B. Galbraith of Petaluma for the fourteen-mile improvement of $254,098. Work will be started and completed within six months, the roadway being eighteen feet wide and of reinforced concrete. Award was also made to A. T. Howe of Santa Rosa for a bridge over Paper Mill Creek at Irving station for $12,004.

Northern California Telephone Company, operating in Sacramento Valley, reports to the Railroad Commission its 1928 operating revenue at $248,673.16, as compared with $219,806.13 for 1927. The operating expenses, excluding taxes or 1928, are reported at $243,125.05, and at $230,498.96 for 1927, leaving net operating revenue of $5,548.11 for 1928, and a net operating loss of $10,692.81 for 1927. During 1928 taxes charged to operation amounted to $13,599.10, and for 1927 to $13,312.37. Deducting the taxes leaves operating loss of $8,050.99 for 1928, and $24,005.18 for 1927.

The first spinach packed at the Porterville plant of the Fred B. Neuhoff Cannery Company for the 1929 season came from President Herbert Hoover's ranch in Kern county, near Wasco. The local cannery will pack all of the output from this ranch, consisting of a planting of ninety acres. The spinach was cut the day before it was canned. A force of about 300 was employed at the plant at the opening of the local season. The harvest from around 300 acres of spinach in the Porterville district will also be packed.

Death Valley residents will soon be able to telephone friends in the outside world if the Railroad Commission grants an application made by the Public Utilities California Corporation. The company wants to purchase for $3300 the properties of the Arizona, California, Nevada Telephone Company, not now connected with the outside world.

The value of timber cut from the national forests of the California district (California and southwestern Nevada) amounted to $1,037,638 in the calendar year 1928, according to T. D. Woodbury, assistant district forester. This total is a 15 per cent increase over the 1927 receipts, and is the first time that the revenue from timber sales in the national forests of California has exceeded one million dollars. The total cut of the national forest timber amounted to 333,000,000 feet. Twenty-five per cent of all receipts from the sale of timber in the national forests is returned to the state for distribution to counties in which the forests are located, for use in the construction and development of roads and trails. This return by the federal government is in lieu of taxes on national forest lands. This presents another argument for motorists to help prevent forest fires, points out the California State Automobile Association.

Assemblyman Joseph Feigenbaum's bill providing courts might levy and collect fines on the installment plan—"5¢ down and $5 a week," if desired, in Feigenbaum's words—was favorably recommended by the Senate committee on the revision of criminal law and procedure.

ED MORRIS SLOW IN CLIMBING UP

Landed With Boston Red Sox After Missing Twice.

It took Ed Morris, sensational pitcher of the Boston Red Sox, eight years to make the big show. An old saying used to be: "Three times and out." With Morris it has been: "Three times and in." And how!

For eight years, Big Ed has been trying to make the major leagues. In fact, back in 1920, when he signed with Brandon, Fla., for $15 a month, he passed up $250 he was making in semi-pro ball just for the chance to start in organized baseball and reach the top.

Eight long years. Seven of those years were spent in pitching for three Southern league clubs. He never had a very pretentious record, but three major league scouts who looked him over thought him worth while. The Chicago Cubs tried him in 1922 and sent him back after working him 12 innings. "Too wild," they said. Cincinnati tried him in 1925 and chased him back. Ed had a sore arm.

There is no denying the fact that Morris was the sensation among the first-year men of the American league for 1928 and his work was all the more surprising when you figure out his 1927 record with Mobile. With the latter he won 15 and lost 17, walked 131 batters, hit 14 and had 6 wild pitches. Nothing to enthuse over. Nothing to indicate that the holder of such a record would win 19 and lose 15 games for Boston, a tall-order in the majors, that he would allow less than one hit to an inning and walk only 76 batters in 256 innings, that he would master every other club in the league. And Manager Bill Carrigan picked no soft spots for Big Ed. To the contrary, Ed had to battle with the best pitchers the opposition could send him. Being the Red Sox ace, he had to pay the penalty.

But it is some honor to become the ace of a major league pitching staff the first year and in so doing, Ed, at the age of twenty-nine, has followed the example of Dazzy Vance, who did not make the grade in the big show until he was twenty-nine and had performed ten seasons in the minor leagues.

Control, now one of Morris' long suits, was his greatest fault in 1927.

Morris takes great pride in the fact that Babe Ruth was not able to call him "Cousin" during the 1928 campaign. In fact, he felt pretty cocky after his first game against the Yankees last spring, a game in which he replaced Simmons with two on, no one out and Koenig, Ruth and Gehrig coming up. Big Ed caused Koenig to force Shealy at third. He worked carefully on Ruth and Babe forced Combs. Then he really bore down and struck out Gehrig.

Not only did Morris prevent Ruth from hitting him for a homer, but he mystified the entire Yankee team to the same extent, the only four-sacker made off him being by Cissell of the White Sox, Brannon of St. Louis and Miller of the Athletics.

"John Sewell," says Morris, "is the toughest man in the league for me to pitch to. You simply have got to give him good balls. The whole Cleveland team was my jinx. I beat the Indians once but they took three from me and knocked me off the rubber twice."

Seek Russian Colony

in Wilds of Siberia

In an effort to find a lost colony in the wilderness of northern Siberia, which preserves the life and thought of the Sixteenth century, a scientific expedition is about to leave Leningrad.

Before the revolution a political exile, M. Zinzino, claimed to have penetrated the icebound fastness of the lost colony. He declared that the people spoke old Russian and were unaware of anything that had happened in the world since the Sixteenth century. More recently a man named Arosin arrived in Moscow with a tale of the Russian tribe.

Both reports place the colony somewhere near the mouth of the Indigirka river, Yakutsk, where it flows into the North Polar sea.

Only about 200 persons form the colony, said Arosin, but scientists think that if the colony has survived for 400 years it must at one time have been far more numerous.

Many Russians died in the Sixteenth century to the inaccessible parts of Siberia to escape political persecution. It is considered likely that the lost colony is formed by descendants of one of these groups of refugees.

MEASURE CREATES HIGHWAY PATROL

Carrying the endorsement of both houses of the legislature, the Breed bill, creating a state highway patrol, controlled and operated directly by the state, and making numerous other important changes in the motor vehicle laws, is in Governor Young's hands.

The bill, representing the first legislative attempt to eliminate the present system of dual control of the traffic officers, was the result of nearly two years of work on the part of the various groups interested in traffic safety and enforcement.

The measure authorizes the creation of a highway patrol, blanketing in all the officers now operating in the county units into one strong central organization. The director of public works is empowered to appoint a superintendent of traffic to take charge of the patrol. The administration of the patrol will be in the division of motor vehicles and under the control of B. B. Meek, the director of public works.

Authority is granted for the division of the state into traffic districts, the formulation of standardized rules and practices, the establishment of training schools for the officers and anything else calculated to provide the maximum of efficiency in the enforcement of traffic laws.

Boards of supervisors may submit lists of prospective appointees to the patrol when vacancies exist. Such nominees may be appointed at the discretion of the director of public works.

The chief of the division may assign members of the patrol to counties other than those from which they were appointed in cases of emergency.

Another section of the act gives the chief of the division authority to establish night patrols in any part of the state.

DIRECT CIRCUIT WILL SPEED UP FRUIT SALES

The farming and produce area of Virginia along the Atlantic seaboard has become so important to New York markets that a new direct telephone circuit has been opened from New York City to Onancock, Virginia.

Onancock is the center of the fruit and produce district of Virginia, and the long distance telephone plays a very important part in the speedy marketing of shipments from this area to New York and other large cities. So perishable is the nature of these commodities that quick sales are absolutely necessary, with the result that goods are frequently shipped to New York and are sold by long distance telephone while they are in actual transit.

Hitherto, these shippers, in placing such long distance calls, had to have them switched at Baltimore, but now, with the opening of the new circuit, this operating step is eliminated and faster service is thus secured.

After all, what is the most important thing in baking?

Modern Gas Ranges are built to insure perfect baking

Is it measuring and mixing ingredients? Is it selecting certain ingredients? All Home Economists know that after all, the most important thing is the correct oven temperature.

For almost anyone using care can measure and mix good ingredients accurately and follow a tested recipe. But in the baking—that's where all your best efforts meet the real test. Women have experienced this for long years.

Today, leading Home Economists are turning to a device that keeps the oven at any temperature. It is called the Oven Heat Control and is a part of the new Gas Range.
